Academic Transition Program (ATP), University of Guelph

A supportive pathway designed to help mature and non-traditional learners prepare for successful university study and transition confidently into a degree program.

About the program:

- Alternative pathway to university for mature and non-traditional students who may not meet traditional admission requirements
- Build essential academic skills such as writing, critical thinking, research, and study strategies
- Supportive learning environment designed to increase confidence and readiness for university-level courses
- Guidance and advising to help plan your degree pathway and navigate university systems
- Preparation for successful transition into undergraduate study and long-term academic success for Bachelor of Arts
